

SAY MANCHUS SEEK THE RUIN OF CHINA

REPUBLICAN LEADERS ARE ANGERED OVER ATTEMPTS TO CHANGE PROPOSALS.

AGREEMENT REACHED

For Establishment of Dual Government But Manchus Balk Acceptance—May Appeal to United States.

Nanking, China, Jan. 20.—The foremost of the republicans here declared today their belief that the Manchus and the younger imperial princes are determined to bring China to ruin and dismemberment as a final restoring act.

Helpless Struggle.

Few persons refuse to recognize the helplessness of the Manchus struggle. Yuan Shi Kai is practically held a prisoner in Peking. He still urges the establishment of a monarchy according to advice received here through Ching Kai Yai, and his closest friends and diplomatic advisers state that Yuan really favors a republic.

A Dual Government.

A few days ago a complete agreement was reached between Yuan Shi Kai and President Sun Yat Sen and Wu Ting Fang, the minister of justice in the provisional cabinet where the Manchus accepted the liberal terms offered, and Yuan Shi Kai, President Sun Yat Sen mutually agreed to a dual government in the vast empire headed respectively by Yuan and President Sun.

Republicans Angered.

The signers of the proposed treaty to the minister of justice in the form of a ministerial convention. This agreement was actually drafted and initiated when Yuan Shi Kai, on behalf of the Manchus, sought to amend it. This angered the republicans and they broke the negotiations.

United States' Aid.

President Sun and the members of the cabinet are firmly convinced that recognition by the powers will come quickly unless the powers are influenced against it. They ask today that they be allowed to ask through the Associated Press the wish that the United States will sustain its original and broad policy and lend its friendly hand to preserve China's integrity.

Would Resign.

San Francisco, Jan. 20.—Dr. Sun Yat Sen announced yesterday that he was willing to withdraw from the presidency of the republic in favor of Yuan Shi Kai, according to a cablegram received by the Chung Yat Po, a Chinese daily newspaper, here today. "The cablegram, dated Hongkong, said President Sun would step aside immediately after the abdication of the throne."

Is Accomplished.

Chicago, Jan. 20.—According to a cable dispatch from Peking to the Chicago Daily News, the abdication of the Manchus dynasty is an accomplished fact and the delay in issuing the edict already drawn is solely to prevent an uprising by the reactionary wing of the imperial family headed by Prince Chun. It also is declared that "Tien Shien will be the temporary capital of China while a new government is being formed."

Batteries Arrive.

Chi Fu, China, Jan. 20.—Four transport batteries arrived here today from Wuhsien. Some of the troops disembarked and took up their quarters in the city.

There were no indications of hostility on the part of the population. The whole city remains quiet.

New Constitution.

Nanking, Jan. 20.—Members of the republican assembly which elected Dr. Sun Yat Sen to the presidency, are now engaged in drawing up a new form of constitution for the new Chinese republic.

Receives Word.

New York, Jan. 20.—The Preliminary board of foreign missions here made public today the following cablegram:

"Shanghai, China, Jan. 20.—Two million, five hundred thousand famine-stricken people. Relief urgently needed. Must rely on American aid to revolution. Committee appeals to America for at least one million dollars in gold."

CUMMINS' CANDIDACY IS ANNOUNCED TODAY

SENATOR FROM IOWA WILL ACCEPT DECISION OF IOWA REPUBLICANS IN HIS FAVOR.

IS PLAIN STATEMENT

Regarding the Conditions as He Sees Them—La Follette Boom Will Continue Without Interruption.

Washington, Jan. 20.—Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa, progressive republican, today announced his candidacy for the republican presidential nomination in a statement in which he says that if the republicans of Iowa believe him a fit man to urge before the Chicago convention, he will accept their decision.

Complicates Situation.

The entrance of Mr. Cummins into the presidential fight materially complicates the republican situation. President Taft is now openly opposed for the nomination by Senators La Follette of Wisconsin and Cummins of Iowa, both progressives, while still other progressives are urging the nomination of Col. Theodore Roosevelt.

Has Been Expected.

The announcement by Senator Cummins had been expected for several days. Coming today in connection with the report from Denver that Gifford Pinchot was taking the initiative in a movement for a conference of progressive republicans to decide upon one candidate to oppose President Taft, it started a riot of political speculation which eclipsed the ordinary activities of the government.

A Plain Statement.

"So much has been published in the newspapers, so much written and said to me concerning the presidential matter, that I feel it to be my duty to make to the republicans of Iowa a plain statement upon the subject. "Immediately upon my return from the last session of Congress I gave out through the press my opinion with respect to the presidency. That opinion remains unaltered. "The situation however, has materially changed and it now seems probable that more than two candidates for nomination will be seriously considered by the national convention.

Willing to Serve.

"Under the conditions if the republicans of Iowa believe that I am a fit man to be presented to the national convention as a candidate for the presidential nomination and desire to so present me I will appreciate and accept their confidence as a most gratifying evidence of their continued faith in my purpose to serve as best I can the general welfare of the people. "Signed, Albert B. Cummins."

La Follette Unmoved.

At the progressive republican campaign headquarters here the declaration was made today by W. L. Houser in charge that the fight for Mr. La Follette would continue as if there were no other progressive candidates on the horizon. "That it was 'Mr. La Follette first, last and all the time.'"

Pre-convention Report.

In regard to a report from Denver to the effect that concerted movement was on foot to hold a pre-convention meeting and decide on one progressive candidate Mr. Houser said he knew nothing whatever of any such move. It could not be that any conference of the sort was likely. Senator La Follette's statement was, when he heard the statement, "I have nothing to say."

Nebraska Willing.

Omaha, Neb., Jan. 12.—Concerning the announcement of Senator Cummins of his willingness to make the race for the Presidential nomination, Victor Rosewater, republican national committee man for Nebraska said to the Associated Press today, "The announcement of Senator Cummins' candidacy was not unexpected as it has been plain for some time that La Follette was losing ground."

BELOIT-JANESVILLE DEBATE ENDS IN TIE

WINNERS WILL DEBATE AGAINST WINNERS IN KENOSHA. RACINE MEETING.

NEGATIVE TEAMS WON

French, McArthur and Judd Win From Beloit.—Metcalf, Cunningham and Foulkes Lose.

Janesville, Beloit, Kenosha and Racine started the debating of the Beloit College Intercollegiate Debating League last night at the different cities. Beloit's negative team won from Janesville here while the local affirmative team won from Beloit in that city giving each three points. The question of debate was resolved: That as far as Illinois and Wisconsin are concerned women should be granted equal suffrage with the men, and the suffragettes in this community could not get much encouragement from the results of the debates.

When the question was argued in the high school auditorium last night Elmer Stone, Carl Rulston and Harry Babban presented such forceful points against the question that the judges gave a 2 to 1 decision against the affirmative as presented by Stanley Metcalf, Robert Cunningham and Thomas Foulkes.

As leader of the affirmative side Stanley Metcalf brought out the fact that while in the past strong men had been required to carry on the government mainly by force of arm civilization had changed and improved conditions until the government of the country was a question of brains and not muscle merely. Women's moral standing is shown by statistics to be much higher than that of men and in the light of modern broad-mindedness it was very evident that women should be given a voice in the running of the country in which they live.

Elmer Stone lead for the negative using as his arguments against equal suffrage that incompetency and ignorance of governmental methods would mark the rule of women unversed in the art of legislation. He spoke of the fact that while some places granted women the right to vote, no severe test had ever shown the women competent, nor was other critical and unlooked for exigency had brought out the best that women were capable of and the outcome would be too uncertain.

In upholding the affirmative Robert Cunningham as the next speaker showed very plainly to what a degree the laws of the states concerned women and their rights. He also dwelt on the fact that women were the greatest economical factors today and that therefore they should have more opportunity to influence legislation in behalf of their reforms.

As his main point against equal suffrage Carl Rulston of Beloit argued that inasmuch as but five per cent of the female population of the United States desired the vote it would be unjust to force it upon the other 95 per cent. They would be required by law to support their husbands and the wife would be placed upon a plane with her husband in all matters of government.

Speaking next for the affirmative Thomas Foulkes named the states which were at present giving the women equal suffrage and showed how the problems of civil and state government were being handled when the women had voted. He concluded by citing the case of the first election in Los Angeles under the new law.

In concluding the points for the negative Harry Babban pointed out that in the places where women had voted there was more corruption among them than there had been among the men. Several women were known to have voted more than once and it was later ascertained that during a fight started by colleagues of the clerk of the election she stuffed the ballot box.

Despite the fact that the visitors had some excellent arguments Robert Cunningham picked much of their debate to pieces in his rebuttal. It was of no use however and the irrefutable points which Beloit had made earned the decision of the judges.

Prof. Charles Foster, of the University of Wisconsin, Prof. E. P. Roybols of the State Normal School, Platteville, Wis., and Prof. G. G. Cliney, of Beloit College acted as judges with S. M. Smith of the board of education of this city as presiding officer of the evening.

Janesville Wins in Beloit. Louis French, Stanley Judd and Glen McArthur received a 2 to 1 decision in Beloit from the Lino City affirmative team composed of Lowery Moore, Charles Tower and Theodore Lipman, last evening in the Beloit high school. The strong arguments of the Janesville boys could not be refuted by the Beloit team although their opponents had a good debate and the twenty or so Janesville people who went down were well pleased at the result.

Lowery Moore of Beloit, opened the affirmative by proving that women should have equal suffrage in a democratic movement and that the welfare of the nation demanded it.

Louis French speaking for the negative brought out the fact that in as much as the vote is given by the state for the benefit of the state it is only natural that the men who are best qualified to handle the state should keep the vote.

Stanley Judd used statistics to show that the questions which came up for decision in the state were those which required the hand of men.

Glen McArthur argued with many examples that the states where women were not allowed to vote had made more political reforms than the other states.

In his rebuttal French made the affirmative arguments look rather thin and when he had finished it was evident that the local boys had won the debate even before the judges handed in their decision. The judges were Prof. R. B. Way of Beloit College, Assistant State Superintendent J. B. Dorton, Madison, and Prof. H. H. Schroeder of Whitewater, Supt. Conservator of Beloit, presided over the debate.

Yards Full of Cars and More Men Are Being Employed Than For Long Time.

Business on the Northwestern line has been gradually increasing for the last few days from extra heavy until now it is almost too heavy. Fifteen and sixteen extras leave Janesville every day loaded with all kinds of merchandise for all over the country. Just at present the freight is of a general character, although a good many fruit trains are being handled now which have been waiting for the cold weather to go so that the receivers could unblock them. Even if the fruit and vegetable men get a shipment from Chicago they were afraid to open the cars during the low temperature and as a result the railroads are compelled to do a great deal of fruit shipping at once.

Nearly one hundred men are employed at the yards now, more than have ever been there at one time before. Two extra boiler makers and four new machinists have been put on the job within the last two days and the car repair gang is working with its full force. Places are still waiting for a number of husky men yet, jobs which will probably last all winter.

More cars are being handled now than ever before 250 being sent South yesterday while the yards were never as full as they are at present. This has been a banner year at the yards and it continues to grow rapidly better.

Voice of the People.

Janesville, Wis., Jan. 18, 1912.

Editor Gazette: Permit me to use your columns to state my views on commission form of government. We are of course, all entitled to our opinion and mine may not have much weight, but I am against the proposed change because it is putting too much power in the hands of a few men. We all know that there is a certain crowd in Janesville who would like to control the politics of the city and I think this plan will give them just what they want. This bunch, or machine, have been responsible for all the agitation in favor of the commission plan and if they are successful at the polls, Tuesday, it will make the commission era, who are only human, friendly to the men who made it possible for them to secure these fat jobs. Any favors, therefore, they can grant these men who are so much interested in the commission plan, will be granted at the expense of the taxpayers. This crowd alone ought to influence the voters who know the real conditions in Janesville and who know the men and the motives back of this agitation for a change from the present form of city government, which has been entirely satisfactory to the general public.

JOHN H. KRUSMEIER.

HICKORY NUTS ARE SCARCE

Boy From Small Indiana Town Markets at Chicago Prices and Recalls Daylong Experiences.

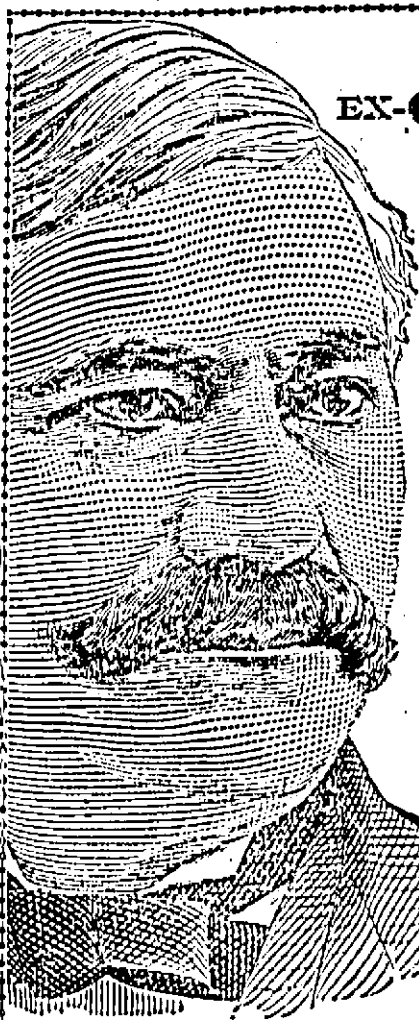

Chicago.—"I tried to buy some hickory nuts the other day and what do you suppose they wanted for them? Five dollars a bushel. Goodness! They ought to be as plentiful in some parts of the country as ever, and as it used to be you couldn't sell them." A south side resident expressed his opinion of the annual fall nut crop recently. He has not lived in Chicago long, having come here about eight years ago from a small Indiana town.

"Why, we used to go out every fall," he continued, "and we would get all the nuts we could carry home. Shell bark hickories, walnuts, hazel nuts, chestnuts and 'chinkapins' used to be so plentiful in my locality that we had a good store of them every year. But nuts were not so thick, and we prized them more than all on that account. Southwest of my home town there was a grove known as 'Hinchley's woods,' and the boys from town would tramp out there after the first frost and carry back grain bags filled with the fruit of the big trees.

"I like walnuts best of those we could get easiest, and my brother and I would take a small wagon out to the woods and bring it back loaded with the green backed goodies. Then would come the hulling.

"There is only one way to hull walnuts and that is to lay the nut down on a brick, hit it with a mallet or hammer and then peel off the hull with bare hands. We did not learn to wear gloves, as only 'sleazebags' did that, and we gloried in the beautiful black stain our hands used to have until almost Christmas. The boys would see who could have the blackest hands during hulling time."

Gives Praise To Pe-ru-na For His Relief From Catarrh.

EX-CONGRESSMAN MEEKISON COMMENDS PE-RU-NA.

"I have used several bottles of Peruna and I feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head. I feel encouraged to believe, if I use it a short time longer I will be fully able to eradicate the disease of thirty years' standing."—David Meekison.

PERUNA RESTORED HEALTH.

Mr. C. N. Peterson, 132 South Main St., Council Bluffs, Iowa, writes: "I cannot tell you how much good Peruna has done me. Constant confinement in my store began to tell on my health, and I felt that I was gradually breaking down. I tried several remedies, but obtained no permanent relief until I took Peruna. I felt better immediately, and five bottles restored me to complete health."

A SINCERE RECOMMENDATION.

Mr. D. C. Prosser, R. R. 6, Shelby, Oceana Co., Michigan, writes: "Two years ago I was badly afflicted with catarrh of the stomach. I had had a run of typhoid fever, was very depleted. I could find nothing I could eat without causing distress and pain. Finally I came to the conclusion that I had catarrh of the stomach and seeing Peruna advertised, began to take it. It helped me soon, and after taking three or four bottles I was entirely cured of stomach trouble, and can now eat anything."

Does Away With Posing.

The latest craze among the Berlin smart set is having "one's" portrait sketched or painted while asleep. This craze was started by an Austrian aristocrat, Countess Evelyn, who, according to a current story, fell asleep while writing in the attcher of a well-known painter. The painter found the countess so charming as she slumbered that he drew her in that condition. The portrait was a great success.

"LOUISIANA LOU" IS DELIGHTFUL COMEDY

Good Cast in Latest Chicago Musical Production Pleased Large Audience at Myers Theatre.

Appealing to the audience as a musical comedy production much better than the ordinary possession of a more subdued and refined tone than some of these attractions, "Louisiana Lou" presented by an able company at the Myers theatre last evening proved to be a gem of its kind.

Taking into consideration that this was the third stand in the initial tour of the second company, Rockford and Freeport having been previously favored, there was a marked freedom from a certain stiffness which might have been excusable. In fact with but one of two exceptions the entire production was given as smoothly as after weeks of playing.

The music of the piece was tuneful and was sung with expression. It might be said that there were less of the more popular, whistly songs that are sometimes assembled into a show, but the music of the production as a whole was charming. Several of the songs which will linger for a long time are, "If Love Be Madness," really the song hit of the piece, "The Rose of the Theatre," which will be a close second for popularity, "Louisiana Lou" and "Let Us Sing the Chorus All Over Again."

The comedy of the piece was altogether clean and amusing, causing genuine laughter and mirth. The story centers around Louisiana Lou, a charming and beautiful girl, who had been raised by Jacob Lidooski, a Russian Jew, who found her when she was a babe. She had been pledged in marriage to the son of Lidooski, a fellow of the name of Jack Konkarny, an Irishman of unmistakable wit, but the match was not agreeable to the principals as it was expected, they were each attracted to other directions and around their tenuous touches of pathos in the play, the ending is satisfactory according to a foregoing conclusion and Louisiana Lou is found to be the daughter of a prince, which really doesn't matter.

Miss Novak as Lou was charming and carried her part to perfection. She appeared in but one song, however, "I Think You Think A Bit Too Much About Too Many," sung by her and Victor Morley, the real lover of Louisiana Lou, and was another of the song hits. Mr. Morley was well fitted to his part and added a certain swing and life to the piece. He was more confident than Jack, Konkarny's son who was intended for Lou, and who seemed slightly cold and distant. Mr. Morley has much promise, however, and will improve. Miss Zela Call as Della Fair, the girl who appealed to Jack, made a pleasing appearance, when she first came onto the stage and in the first song, "If Love Be Madness," which she sung in a delightful manner.

Mr. Lobert as Lidooski was one of the best actors in the company and his reading of the lines was far better than the ordinary. He furnished not a little of the humor and he was also responsible for several subtle touches of pathos. "The Rose of the Theatre," which was sung by him received a storm of merited applause. He had several other creditable songs. Miss Taylor as Jennie Wip, deserves mention for her admirable portrayal of a comedy part and although she suffered from a severe cold she carried her lines in a most pleasing manner. Mr. Lorry as Konkarny favored the audience with some real Irish jargon and irrepressible wit, and Mr. Christy as the Duke de Lamo and equally amusing.

The chorus was possessed of grace and beauty seldom seen in the second company and had several unusually pretty dances the best of which perhaps, was the Puritan Dance. Their singing was good and they aided in carrying the swing and rhythm of the piece. The chorus men took their parts admirably.

The costumes and scenery all now were beautiful, blending in tone and color, in an artistic effect. On the whole the production was a very creditable one and the company is assured of success.

POULTRY

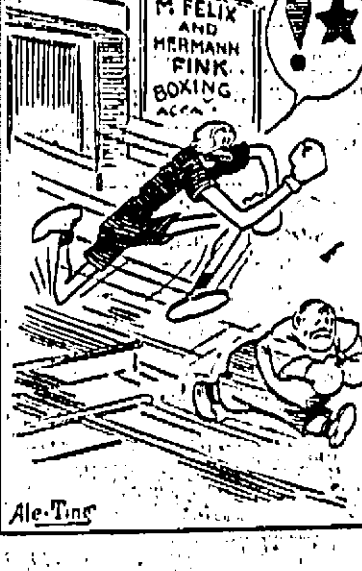

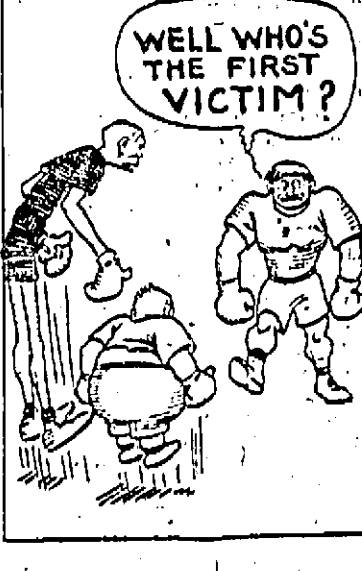

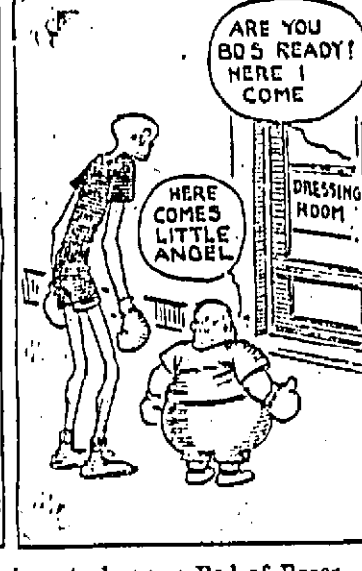

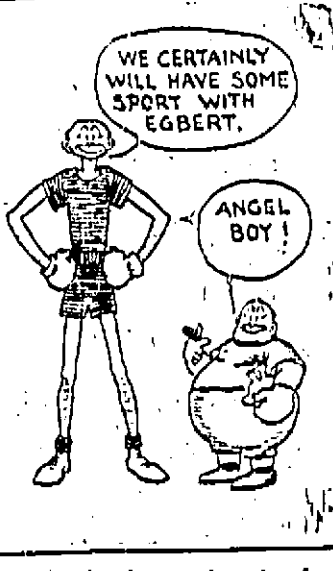

ONE GOOD FATTENING RATION

Pennsylvania Station Makes Suggestion as to Food Where Different Kinds of Poultry are Desired.

The Pennsylvania station suggests the following grain rations for fattening poultry, as having been used with success:

Where a yellow flesh is wanted a ration should be made of cornmeal, five parts; ground oats, hulls removed, two parts; animal meal, one part mixed with sour milk. Where a white flesh is wanted the following rations are recommended: Corn meal, two parts; ground buckwheat, two parts; ground oats, two parts mixed with sour milk. Another: Barley meal, two parts; middlings, two parts; buckwheat, two parts; corn meal, one part, mixed with sour milk. Another: The refuse from shredded wheat and sour milk.

When birds are confined for fattening sour milk aids digestion and keeps the system from getting feverish. If no milk is available some form of animal or green food must be supplied to make the best gains. Should a chicken for any reason get off its food a good plan is to turn it out in the yard. It will usually recover in a short time. Water should be given once a day and grit twice a week. The rations should be fed rather soft, about like porridge. The food should never remain before them from one meal to another. Take it away twenty minutes after feeding.

FELIX AND FINK—Life in the Boxing Academy is not always a Bed of Roses.

DOULTRY NOTES

Don't sell cracked or very small eggs.

Grit and oyster shells should not be forgotten.

You can gain two or three cents a dozen by shipping your own eggs.

A fifty hen house is the best breeding place for lice and mites.

If you want eggs in winter we must breed from hens that lay in winter.

The idea that water is necessary to any one who cares to raise ducks is a mistake.

In fly season, keep netting over the egg basket, as fly-specked eggs are not selling.

State bread thoroughly dried and rolled into fine crumbs is excellent chicken food.

It is time for questions about getting fowls to come down out of trees and roost in houses.

Careless and indifferent systems of feeding are often the cause of poor milk yields and small profits.

It is absurd to expect pullets to lay during the early winter when they were not hatched until June or July.

Eggs during the hot weather should be removed from the nests at once and placed in the coolest spot in the house.

There should be provided plenty of fresh clean water to drink, preferably water from which the chill has been taken off.

Cabbage heads or mangels make an acceptable green feed for them to pick up, also apple and potato parings are much relished.

NERVES WORN OUT; FELL EXHAUSTED

MRS. SAMUEL WAS A NERVOUS AND PHYSICAL WRECK BEFORE GOING TO THE UNITED DOCTORS.

The wonderful cures that are being made by the new methods of treatment originated and used only by the United Doctors, who have their headquarters in the Hayes Bldg., are constantly a greater source of wonder and comment. People who have kept track of the work of these progressive specialists are loud in their praise of them.

Mrs. Emma E. Samuel, whose address is P. O. box 168, Blair, Neb., was a patient of the United Doctors, and now she writes of her case as follows:

Blair, Neb.
"I wish to make a statement as to the wonderful results you have accomplished in my case. When I called on you in May of last year I had suffered for years with sciatic rheumatism and extreme nervous prostration. I would fall unconscious at times, so completely run down was I in my general health.

"Well, there has been a wonderful change in the last four months. The rheumatism is practically gone. The other day I was able to do housework to the surprise of everyone as I had not been able to do any housework to speak of for two or three years.

"I cannot explain in words how I have been benefited by the United Doctors but my looks and feelings tell the story. I never expected such relief so soon, but I certainly am on the road to permanent health and owe my recovery to the United Doctors."
"MRS. EMMA E. SAMUEL."

At four-thirty this afternoon the Y. M. C. A. first team left for Whitewater where they will play this evening with the team from that city. The game was first scheduled for last Saturday night but on account of the extreme cold was postponed until this week.

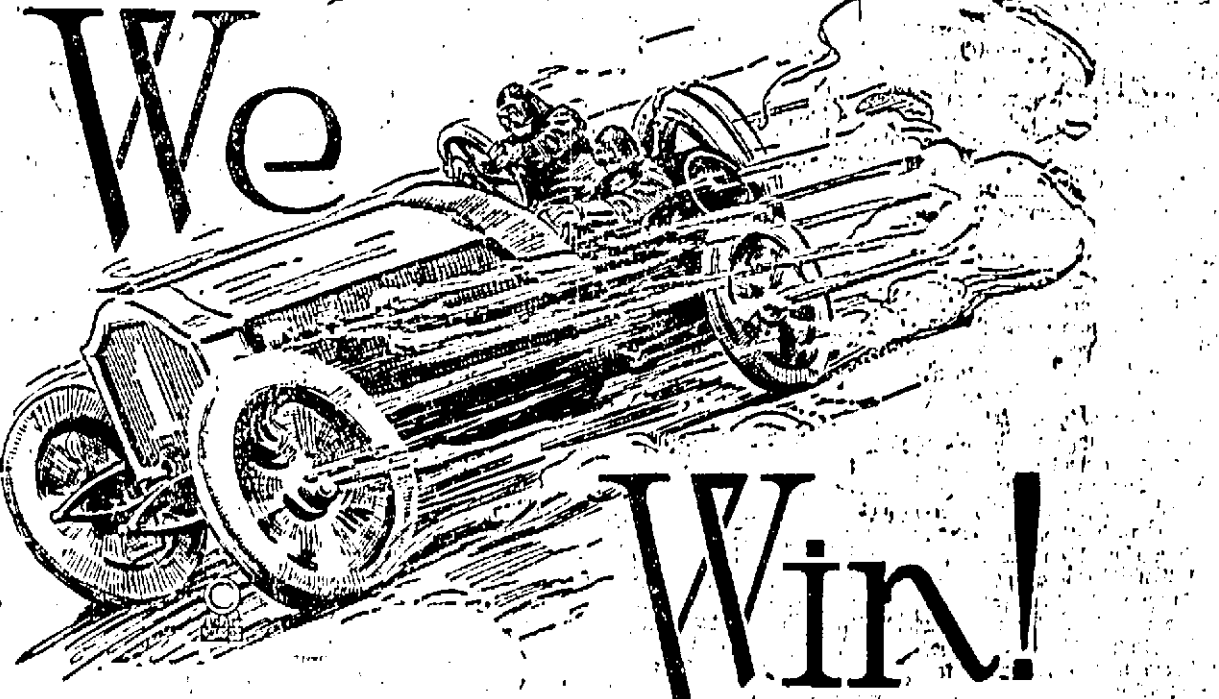

Captain Kopp, Shuler, Brown, Wilson, McDonald, and Ryan will be the ones who are expected to defeat the Whitewater five tonight.

Charles Durham, Lovington, Ill., has succeeded in finding a positive cure for bed wetting. "My little boy wet the bed every night clear thro' on the floor. I tried several kinds of kidney medicine and I was in the drug store looking for something different to help him when I heard of Foley's Kidney Pills. After he had taken them two days we could see a change and when he had taken two thirds of a bottle he was cured. That is about six weeks ago and he has not wet in bed since." Dudgeon Drug Co.

—Brooklyn Eagle.

The average work horse is good for about four miles an hour on the road, and the average driving horse about six. The eight-mile horses are in a class by themselves, and the roadster that shows a ton-mile clip for a couple of hours is the rare exception.
Machinery is built to carry certain loads. A road engine that picks up a four-passenger car with ease, complains when asked to handle a seven-ton truck, and refuses to do the work when attached to a heavy truck.
The light passenger engine speeds across the plains with a dozen cars at a sixty-mile pace, but when the foothills are reached the big mogul is brought into service for the mountain climb.
What is true of horses and machines is equally true of men. There is a limit to ability and endurance, and while we are slow to recognize it, the stubborn fact remains.
It is a mistaken notion that "all men are created free and equal." We like to feel that all men are free in this free land, but there are limitations to freedom, and so far as equality is concerned, there's nothing in it.
A New York socialist of advanced ideas said, a time ago, that in the good time coming there would be a division of labor as well as of property. The banker would attend to his bank for thirty days, and then exchange places with the man who worked with a shovel on the street. Both would live in the country and would get down to business at nine o'clock in the morning. That would mean equality in its broadest sense, but the scheme is too visionary for consideration.
There are as many grades of opportunity as there are channels of work, and this fact is always recognized when the question of equal opportunity is discussed. The man with the shovel, through the development of muscle, earns his daily wage, while the man at the desk would be a failure at the same kind of work. He could, of course, develop muscle by exercise, but the man on the street could not develop mind and intellect sufficient to take his place in the office.
Birth-right, environment, training and many other things conspire to make the question of equality so theoretical that there is no argument to support it.
There is a period in the life of every young man, who is working under direction, when opportunities surround him so closely that they are within easy grasp. He does not often realize it, but he is passing through the testing period which decides destiny.
The office or the shop, where his energies are invested, has an eye on him, and if he makes good, and a little more, there is always a place for him nearer the front. The demand was never more urgent than it is today for men, and the opportunities for advancement never so abundant.

But the author of the little poem at the head of this article did not have in mind the boys and young men who are striving for a foothold in the arena. He was impressed with the thought that the men in middle and mature life, who have settled down to work and are not likely to change, are inclined to take life too seriously, by not taking time to live.
The average man, in any calling, strikes his gut before he passes middle life. If it is a four mile pace, he is usually content to jog along, and he is apt to get more out of life, in the way of contentment, than the men in the six, eight and ten mile class, whose ambition is not so easily satisfied.

There are some speakers who can talk to an audience for an hour and a half without exhausting a topic or wearying their hearers, but they are the exception. About thirty minutes is the time limit on the average speaker.
So there are a few men at the front in every line of work, who never seem to exhaust their resources, but the most of us are average people and get so busy in the little details of every day life that we exceed our natural gait, and wear out a dozen or twenty years before our time.
The days are as long as ever, but they are too short, and so we transmute our work to worry and take it home to cheer the wife, and make the night hideous. In the meantime the world jogs along, at steady pace, and we fall to create a ripple outside the little circle where we move.
In the animal kingdom lame and foundered horses are sidetracked, not because of age, but because the power of endurance was not equal to the strain of abuse and neglect to which they had been subjected.
These conditions also exist in the realm of humanity, but the responsibility is different. The horse is a dumb and helpless servant who obeys uncomplainingly without argument or question, but man is a free moral agent, possessing a will of which he alone is master. He is spurred to action by this silent monitor and ambition prompts him to a pace which is often ruinous.
When man is at his best, his threefold nature, the physical, the mental and the moral, work in harmony. The diseases which affect the "physical" are frequently diseases of the mind, and so it often happens that men break down in middle life because the mental equipment demanded more in work and worry than the body could endure.
The engine performs a day's work and is then cooled off, rested out, and put in condition for tomorrow's run. The engineer who runs the machine is entitled to the same thoughtful consideration. Men and machines are not built like watches for perpetual motion, and yet between the day's work and the night's worry a lot of people mark time with clocklike regularity, and the constant grind tells on the delicate mechanism which we use and abuse at pleasure.
It is much easier to retain health than to regain it. This fact is fully recognized, even by the medical profession today, and the best colleges have a chair devoted to teaching the prevention of disease. The trains running south and to the east, at this season of the year, are crowded with semi-invalids. People who have been brought up at a sharp turn by warning symptoms, and who are making desperate efforts to regain the health which should not have been lost, and which might have been retained by the exercise of a little common sense.
Take time to live for you'll be dead a long time, and the next generation will take but little interest in your memory.
"Course you got to keep a-joggin'
Or your wheels will all be cloggin',
But you needn't be the swiftest in the game.
Learn your speed and then go to it,
And you'll never have to rue it.
Take your time and you will get there just the same."

ON A SPUR OF THE MOMENT
HE NEEDS THE MONEY.
Father's Java and his slinkers he got at the three-cent lunch.
He's quite modest in his eating for somehow he's got a lunch.
That he'd better use economy in picking out his hash.
For o'er long he'll stand in need of quite a little bunch of cash.
He is walking down to business and he's walking home at night.
Savory car fare, and his clothes begin to be an awful sight.
He has stopped his Sunday papers and as true as you're alive,
He has quit ten-cent perfectos and he now buys three for five.
He gets shaved now once a week when heretofore 'twas once a day.
And he's dodging old acquaintances in a mysterious way.
For he's on the water wagon; that's no sort of idle dream,
And he's pinching every quarter till he makes the circle scream.
All this news is quite astonishing till you consider that
It is drawing nigh to Christmas and there are time in his flat.
DIPPED FROM THE STREAM
It should not be difficult to get the freedom of the city of Gratts, Texas. According to report, treasure-seekers have discovered a $15,000,000 treasure in Honduras. It was probably buried by some president of Honduras who was about to leave the country hurriedly.
An agricultural school has been established in Yucatan. It must be that they are intending at last to raise something in Yucatan beside a disturbance.
A report says that there are 500,000 common school teachers in the United States. And there are some remarkably good looking ones, too.
Vienna people complain of the high cost of living. If they had to buy Vienna bread in this country they would have a real kick coming.
Of course, Mr. Carnegie will not be able to print any divorce proceedings in his "peace" newspaper.
It seems to be safer to go over Niagara Falls in a barrel than to be a prime minister of Russia.

THE MAN WITHOUT ANY BRAINS.
The surgeons in a well-known eastern hospital have a queer case on their hands. The patient is a gentleman who fell off a ten-story building or something like that and lost his supply of gray matter. The accident didn't kill him and the surgeons believe that he will live a long life.
The man himself is said to be rather discouraged. He does not have the keen insight into affairs that once he had and he misses his cerebrum, cerebellum and medulla terribly. He somehow cannot look into the problems of the future with the degree of intelligence he enjoyed before the accident. But it seems as though he should find a place in life, even if he has no brains, and yet get along pretty well. A good many others have little trouble in doing so and there are many occupations open to them. He might, for instance, get a job as well-master of a college squad. Then again he might go into politics and in time work his way into congress or into a fat federal appointment. There is always a demand for men of his calibre to exceed the speed limits with automobiles in the city streets and he ought to make a great hit in the heroic role of some musical comedy. His problem is no problem at all.

THE HUNTER
He marches off bound for the fray,
Long he has waited for the day.
He has an outfit unsurpassed, and when he gets upon the train,
His children kiss him fondly, and his friends all grasp him by the hand.
It will be many long weeks 'fore you see his dear face again.
How he has longed for Northern Michigan. And how he's going to get his wish.
He's never been up there before. His heart is filled with pride and joy.
He needs no rabbit. They're too tame. He's going out for bigger game.
A thing he has wished to do e'er since he was a barefoot boy.
He's spent most all his hard earned dough, more that he could afford to blow.
Because he wants to go in style and do the thing up simply right.
There's nothing that he hasn't bought by way of fixin' that he ought.
He's all fussed up in hunting clothes of loud design and out-of-fight.
A week goes by. They get no word and start to wonder what's occurred.
Until one day a telegram fills them with nervous dread and fear.
"The short but very eloquent and everyone knows what is meant."

Heart to Heart Talks.
By EDWIN A. NYE.
THE HUSBAND'S DECALOGUE.
First.—Thou shalt have no other wife before thee than her whom thou hast legally wedded.
Second.—Thou shalt not put the home where thou lodgest and thy wife lodges before thy lodge or thy club or any other place.
Third.—Thou shalt not be a ladies' man abroad, a genial spirit among the fellows and likewise a grouch in thine own house.
Fourth.—Thou shalt give of thy money that which is due thy wife, lest unhappily thy wife should search thy trouser pocket when thou art asleep at the switch.
Fifth.—Thou shalt not complain of thy wife's victims at thy table, but brag thereon. Neither shalt thou be slow to wipe the dishes of the table of thy house nor to sweep the porches of thy residence.
Sixth.—Thou shalt not lapse the premium upon the policy of life insurance nor withhold the price thereof, lest thy wife borrow money to bury thee or thou guest to the potter's field.
Seventh.—Thou shalt not let thy children stray from school and work to feed thee except thou be ill, for when thou art old thy children may despise thee and let thee go over the hills to the poorhouse.
Eighth.—Thou shalt not smoke Havana perfectos, nor sit in the seat of the gamblers, nor dally with the champagne when it stirrith itself, and let thy wife's millinery bills go unpaid and see thy seed begging bread.
Ninth.—Thou shalt not leave the teaching of thy children to thy wife, nor to thine handmaiden, nor to thy manservant, nor to the Sunday school teacher, but thou shalt train them up in the way they should go, and when they are old they shall not depart from it.
Tenth.—Thou shalt behave thyself as a husband and a father and as a citizen of the republic, and thou shalt vote at the primaries and also at the elections in order that thou shalt live long in the land and be able to swat the crafters at the ballot box and save thy country.

Attractive Vase.
An effective centerpiece for the breakfast table is a flower vase of wood brown bamboo. They come in a variety of shapes. Inside are sheet iron or metal receptacles to hold the water. Most any flower shows to advantage against the dull brown of the bamboo. Many of these vases are loosely woven and dull red or green pottery peeks through the interstices. They may be found in any oriental store.
Cause of Rust Spots.
Many rust spots on clothes are caused by bits of soap adhering to the latter when they come in contact with the bluing water. Avoid having these unsightly marks by cutting the soap into small pieces and tie them in a salt bag kept for the purpose.

Two Highlandmen, visiting Glasgow for the first time, were taking a walk through the city. Turning the corner they were very much surprised to see a water cart sprinkling the street. Not having seen anything of the kind before, Tougall, under a misapprehension, cried out to the driver: "Hey, man; hey, man, you're lovin' 'a' your water." His friend, annoyed by Tougall's want of knowledge, ran after him, caught him by the sleeve and said, rather testily: "Tougall, man, Tougall, don't be showin' your ignorance. Do ye no see it's to keep the ladies 'a' the back o' the cart?"—The Glasgowkeep-er.
Sports in Hyde Park.
The organized games for school children to be started in Hyde Park will be quite like old times for the park itself. For, in the early days, Hyde Park was a regular sporting center, celebrated in Charles I's reign for its foot races, and in Cromwell's time for its coaching matches. Cromwell himself tried his skill as a coachman there and ended up by being flung off the box. And when it was not the scene of playing it formed a meeting place for fighting. Here the duke of Humilton and Lord Mohun fought their fatal duel in 1712, and Charles James Fox had his "affair of honor" with Mr. Adam.—London Chronicle.

A Peculiar Telephone Situation.
For years we've held the lead in the telephone field in Janesville. We've always had a list double that of our competitor. 'Twas not so in the olden days. The Bell Company had a monopoly here and how they did "soak" it to their poor subscribers. Only 360 phones after being in operation 20 years; $3 a month for a residence phone; an old grounded wire system that was unable to distinctly transmit sound other than its own rattle and bang. Service there was none. Things were so bad that The Rock County Telephone System, owned and managed by Janesville men came into the field and progress immediately set in. If telephone monopoly should ever be allowed to flourish here again there would be an instant revolution to the old service or rather no service. Boost along the progressive idea. Install a Rock County Phone in your home. You can reach people with it the people you want to reach. $1.00 per month.

Bettering Things:
We are not content to run in ruts, but must better things each year. In more than one respect this 1912 White Sale is a step ahead. You'll find the evidence all through page 8.
Here right in the middle of winter with two feet of snow on the ground and the thermometer generally below zero we shall hold a White Goods Sale that for variety of materials, beauty of patterns, and quality of stock has never been equaled in Janesville. It's going to be a white goods season again sure. Already the white goods stock is fast elbowing out the other lines and we have allotted a good deal more shelf and counter space than usual to accommodate and comfortably show this department.
The announcement today on page 8 tells such an economy story as has been rarely seen. Good fortune has come our way, some, by chance, much more because we went after it in a compelling, masterful way. In all it is a presentation of special offerings that should fill this store with eager buyers all next week, starting Tuesday.

Olive Oil to Remove Cinders.

The man with the cinder in his eye was suffering great pain. Every one had a different method of relief to suggest, but nothing had the desired effect. At length one of the bystanders procured a little olive oil from the lunch room. This was poured into the eye and relief was instant. "I learned that method of dealing with cinders while abroad," said the bystander, "and I guess it is about as effective as anything after all."

BIG POULTRY SHOW WILL CLOSE TODAY

TONIGHT IS LAST OPPORTUNITY TO SEE FINEST DISPLAY OF BIRDS IN STATE.

ALL RIBBONS PLACED

McVicar's Black Orpingtons Were
Big Prize Winners—Others
Specially Mentioned.
(By F. J. HOLT.)

Today ends the successful poultry show that has been held at the rink for the past six days. After tonight most of the birds will be placed in the breeding pens to produce the prize winners for the next exhibit. The Holt and Rockford shows will close tonight. These two exhibits, so we are informed, have about 400 birds each while our local show has 1,100. This shows that Janesville is a natural poultry show center. The date for the fifth season has been fixed for January 13 to 18, 1913. As this date has been selected early it is not thought that any of the nearby towns will neglect the same week.

All Ribbons Placed.
All the ribbons had been placed by noon yesterday. In Black Orpingtons, Jack McVicar won every blue ribbon, the strongest class of birds that has ever been shown in the state. His first cock, hen and pullet were purchased by Morton men. In Houdans the Holt-Brown company took every ribbon but one, or a total of 17 out of 18. First S. C. Red pen was won by Henry Pratt of our city, while the first pen of R. C. Reds went to J. L. Hodson of Lima Center. Roy Schoenfeld of Edgerton won the cup for highest scoring pen of Black Langshans and Will Abernethy of S. C. W. Leghorns. Oscar Erdman received the blue for pen in R. C. Brown Leghorns and M. Day in S. C. Browns.

Kester Re-engaged.
Much credit for the rapidly with which the ribbons were hung up must be given Miss Mable Greenwood, who so ably assisted J. L. Kester in showing the birds. The birds were well taken care of and we understand that she will be with us another year, which means good work for 1913.

Mr. G. V. Kester left on the noon train for his home in Indiana. Next week he is to be at La Porte, Ind. His services are in great demand and that is the reason the directors thought it best to engage him at once for the show of next season. They are also looking out for securing the services of a second judge and, if possible, E. G. Roberts of Ft. Atkinson will be the second man. Mr. Roberts has the reputation of being an excellent judge and has been hired for some of the largest shows in the country. With these two men to award the ribbons our show will surely be judged as well as any in this section of the state.

If you have not been to the rink to see you go tonight. The showman will not close until this evening which will give everyone a good chance to see the exhibit after work hours. Go and look the birds over carefully so that you will be better versed in the work of poultry keeping. It is interesting to see how the poultry work is going ahead and gaining more favor with the public each year. This is shown in the people who are attending the exhibit this year, for many who have always thought that the work was that of an invalid have changed their mind. In other sections of the country the large daily papers have poultry editors, the same as they do society and other editors. To think of the poultry industry being large enough to warrant this makes everyone take additional pride in the work.

System of Scoring.
The local show is getting too large and the quality too good for the score card system and there has been considerable talk about trying the comparison system in the near future. As this is something that is of vital importance to the exhibitors I would advise that they write the secretary their opinion in the matter so that the local association will be able to settle the matter to the best interest of all. Remember Janesville for next year and plan now on being at the show. Everybody here this year is well satisfied with the show room and in the awards. As a sales show this cannot be excelled. The awards are a great help in advertising, for it means something to win in a show of this size and quality.

Librarians and their assistants and apprentices, trustees and citizens throughout the state who have shown marked interest in library work have been mailed printed circulars by the trustees of the Janesville public library inviting them to attend the twenty-first annual meeting of the Wisconsin Library Association which will be held in this city, February 21-23. The circulars contain in addition to the extension of an invitation an outline of the program of the meetings, directions for reaching Janesville, time tables, information on hotel accommodations, place of meeting and entertainment. RACES ON GAS POND PLAN FOR TOMORROW

Horsemen Will Meet on Ice at Two-
Thirty—Ice in Good Shape
After Scraping.

Many horse lovers will make an appearance at the gas pond tomorrow to witness the races which are planned for the afternoon. Scrapers will clean the ice and have it in good condition for the speeding and as some of the best horses in the city are planned to compete the spectators will probably be shown at least one exciting race during the afternoon. Sheridan, Mahoney, Schmidley, Lloyd, Jones and Shoemaker all have horses which they are planning on entering tomorrow. Of these Sheridan's "Yellow Boy" has shown the best form up to date but it remains to be seen who will drive the fastest animal in the city. Maxfield has been asked to act as starter for the races and the heats will be run as strictly as on the track.

ICE CUTTING NEARLY FINISHED FOR 1912

Work Will Probably Be Ended Tonight
With Houses Full and Plenty
For a Year.

Work on the ice has been rushed so rapidly and the weather has been so ideal for harvesting ever since the cutting was started that it will probably be finished this afternoon. A large force of men were still at work late this afternoon and it is thought that by an extra effort the entire house can be filled. The crop is very thick this year and is very clear and solid being most perfect for commercial purposes. The lower houses have been filled for several days and work on the river opposite the island has been going on for two or three days in an effort to get the upper and lower houses filled before the weather changed or some other unforeseen circumstance should prevent the harvest of the crop while it was in good condition.

SCIENTIFIC TEMPERANCE INSTRUCTION TOPIC AT
W. C. T. U. MEETING

Paper on Subject Was Read at Meeting of Milton Branch, Held Recently.

At the regular meeting of the Milton W. C. T. U. Miss Cornelia Reddy, who had charge of the meeting, read a paper on the theme of scientific temperance instruction. The thought of the paper was the necessity of such teaching and the possibilities of its being undertaken in the home and the school. High ideals must be inculcated in the minds of children before effective headway can be made in the struggle against the devastating liquor habit.

She united with the Congregational church in early life and had always been a good Christian and earnest church worker.

At the close of the arguments by the speakers, a number of other members of the church took a hand in the discussion making the meeting a highly interesting one to the members who were present. Miss Leona Post favored the audience with a violin solo and Mrs. Mabelle Shearer gave a reading. A delightful evening was spent and the occasion with the serving of refreshments.

MAY EXPECT STORMS DURING NEXT WEEK

Foster's Weather Bureau Gives Predictions for Coming Week and Promises Storms.

Copyrighted 1911, by W. T. Foster. Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross continent January 18 to 23 and 24 to 28, warm waves 17 to 21 and 23 to 27, cool waves January 20 to 24 and 26 to 30. This period of about ten days which includes the two disturbances mentioned was expected to begin with low temperatures and end with unusually warm weather, with rain or snow below the usual or normal amount.

Severe Storms.
The storms were expected to be most severe from January 24 to 27. As a whole the ten days covers a period of dry weather or not much precipitation. That ten days and the five days following cover a period thought to be unfavorable to winter grain because of freezing and thawing and very little snow or other precipitation. It was believed that up to the middle of January winter grain would be in good condition.

Next disturbance will reach Pacific coast about January 27, cross Pacific slope by close of 28, great central valleys 29 to 31, eastern sections February 1. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about January 27, great central valleys 29, eastern sections 31. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about January 30, great central valleys February 1, eastern sections February 3.

Freezing and Thawing.
This disturbance will continue the warm and dry weather with freezing at night and thawing during the day, altogether unfavorable to winter grain, but rather pleasant as winter weather. In other respects the weather will not be of much importance during the period of that disturbance. The roughest weather of last half of January is expected from 24 to 29, but very unlike the storms earlier in the month in that it will be as radically warm as the earlier storms were cold. These coming storms will have less precipitation than those of first half of January.

Grain and Cotton.
February will largely decide the fate of winter grain and cotton. It will make a specialty of that subject including crop weather conditions. Millions of people are anxious about winter grain and February will tell the story. But of greater importance to cotton. Last year gave us the largest of all cotton productions and these bulletins are credited with having correctly forecasted that crop. What will the cotton harvest be? When correctly answered it will mean millions of dollars to those who still have interests in the 1911 crop. I have carefully calculated the cotton crop weather for 1912 and will soon take up that discussion.

PLEA FOR PROGRESS IN EDUCATION WORK

Prof. F. J. Lowth Says Indifference is Danger in Educational Work —Training School News.

On the subject of education and progress, Prof. Lowth writes as follows: All improvement is preceded by thinking. We do not get to a higher plane of activity unless we change our ideas, our habits of thought. It is sometimes surprising how slowly the masses of people are to become influenced by new ideas even though these ideas are entirely correct and have many times been proven to be absolutely sound. We are exceedingly conservative, most of us.

One of the most striking illustrations of the indisposition to change for the better is seen in the use of our schools, in both town and country, out especially in the country, when we understand and appreciate the fact that what was perhaps fitting and proper a quarter-century or half-century ago is distinctly out of date in our day and age. Text-books are being used in rural districts all over the United States, which are antiquated and altogether unsuitable to the children of this new generation.

It is often difficult to get people to think about those things which affect their own welfare the most closely. For example what caring of our children, but how often is almost criminal negligence shown in this particular.

But after all people are getting marked up. The forces of education are so many and so overwhelmingly persistent in their appeals that we must listen, we must heed the notes of warning and the admonitions to something better and richer.

We have had a fine illustration here in Janesville this week of the new work of education which is going on. We have had opportunities here this week in the poultry show, in the exhibit car, and in the lectures by professors from the state university, all of these showing the trend of the times in the way of uplift, of doing our work better, more scientifically. We have blooded chickens and we have peddled corn. We are learning the waste of slovenly, indifferent farming. We are waking up.

When even that great oriental giant, China, can awake from his thousand-year slumber because of the influence of christian ideas, scientific ideas, of christian ideas, scientific ideas, surely we here, in the very heart of the best country and section of country in the world, with all the educating influences round about us surely we can do more than we have done. Rock county must be a leader.

And especially, may we not make life worth more to the boy and girl on the farm than it ever has been to the end that the next generation of farmers and farmers' wives should have more of the joy of real true living.

Training School Notes.
Miss Jacobson's class, who lives on a farm near Elk, has been very sick and she went home on this account, Friday evening.

We now have a list of several places for girls to board for the five school days at very moderate prices. We also have a number of places where students may work for board.

On Friday afternoon text-books were returned and new ones have been handed out. Full preparations have been made for the new quarter which opens on Monday. This first session has been a very successful one for all concerned.

Fourteen young women will begin observation work in the grades next week.

Miss Buckmaster is now teaching the students perspective drawing, and we expect to devote a good deal of time and attention to this.

Miss Cora Thorson was out of school two days of last week because of the marriage of a relative.

Miss Juliette Finnane attended the funeral of a friend on Friday.

Miss Hangan's mother of Orfordville, has been quite sick.

Four of the state normal schools offer course of study for the training of rural school teachers. The standard for admission to these courses in these schools is much lower than our own.

Doctor Winship says, "Let us have rural schools for country life," let us have for our watch word: the country school of today for the country life of tomorrow."

Here are some good points for us all to remember from the same writer: The country teacher must know and love country life and want to stay there. Her interest must be in the community.

The country teacher must prefer country life, country amusements, country freedom to city life.

Country schools must emphasize and develop love for nature.

Country schools must make the country, the farm, the country home, the source of material in all teaching.

The geography class has made some very creditable relief maps, using flour and salt.

The geography of Rock county has been especially emphasized. Each girl has a good printed map and besides has made one of her own drawing.

It manifests itself in local aches and pains, inflamed joints and stiff muscles—but it cannot be cured by local applications.

It requires constitutional treatment, and the best is a course of the great blood purifying and tonic medicine

A SOFT-HEARTED BURGLAR

WHEN GREEK MEETS GREEK A HARD LUCK STORY GETS THE PLUNDER

By E. V. COTTMAN

"He will drink to your better employment and my better fortune."

JERRY DEEMS, pickpocket and second-story man, paused a moment in his delicate work of removing a piece of glass from the dining room window in one of the fashionable houses on Riverside Drive. He listened carefully, but could not hear a sound. Outside the world lay peaceful and quiet, inside all was as silent as the tomb. Reassured by the favorable conditions, Jerry cautiously continued his operations, and in a few seconds a semi-circular piece was lifted out of the pane, a cautious hand slipped through and sprang the latch, and Jerry's portly form struggled through the open window.

"Time was when he could slip through a window as lightly as the heat of them, but several lengthy periods of enforced idleness 'up the river' had rendered him somewhat corpulent, and his waist-line had not the small measure of former years. It was long after midnight, and he was tired. This was not the first house Jerry had visited that night. He had made a few calls in another part of the city with satisfactory results, and by all means should now have been safely making for his quarters. But Jerry possessed a trait that many of us have—that of not letting well enough alone. This he soon realized, for when he straightened up to head, for a moment, the light was suddenly flashed on, and he found himself locked in the steady mouth of a six-shooter, in the hands of a tall, slender woman.

"Well, I'll be—," he exclaimed, and sat down heavily in a chair that happened to be near the window.

"Surprised, are you?" asked a cool, mocking voice. "I think I am the one to be surprised. My visitors do not usually enter through the window." She stood there, calm and smiling, holding the pistol in a way that plainly showed that she knew how to use it. She was dressed in a loose pink bathrobe, and had a lace scarf twisted about her head.

"Don't move," she said. "Now put your hands on the table." Jerry did so, and she looked him over scornfully with her bright eyes.

"Well, mum," said Jerry in a sheepish tone, "I'm yer meat. You certainly got me dead to rights."

As he spoke he gave a furtive glance around the room. Her keen eyes followed his gaze as he measured the distance from the chair to the window.

"I wouldn't try that, if I were you,"

she said. "I mean business, and I'll shoot at your feet now."

"All right, lady, all right," said Jerry. "Shut out and let's get it over. It's no fun for the pen, I guess."

"Not so fast," she answered. "I've always wanted to meet a real, live burglar, and now that I've got my wish, I want to ask you a few questions."

"Well, start the ball rolling," said Jerry, who was getting disgusted with the whole affair. "Does you want to know what church I go to, or would you like to know if I'm married or single?"

The lady smiled. "Neither," she said, "but I would like to know why an able-bodied man like you can't find something better to do than sneaking into other people's houses in the night. Isn't there plenty of work for a man to do that is honest and respectable?"

"Do you mean to say that you can't make a living without taking what doesn't belong to you? Why can't you drive a wagon, or work in a mill, or do something to earn an honest living?"

Jerry averted his eyes in a sheepish manner. "Cut it out, mum," he said, raising a watchful pair of eyes to hers. "Cut it out! I didn't come out tonight to listen to a sermon on honesty. If you're going to call me a con, do it, and hold yer jaw, fer I ain't in no humor just about now to be riled."

"But you haven't answered me," persisted the lady. "Why don't you work?"

"Work!" broke in Jerry. "You're a party dame to be talkin' about work. Have you ever worked in yer life? What do you know 'bout work?"

"Have you ever been hungry or slept in the street? Have you ever tried to get a job that paid livin' wages? Of course you ain't. It's a fine talk when yer pocket's full of money, an' yer bank account's a mile long! What 'd you know about bein' broke?"

"I know more about it than you think," she returned, letting a little warmth creep into her dark eyes. "For that is precisely the position I find myself in at present."

"You broke!" exclaimed Jerry incredulously, throwing his eyes around the richly furnished room. "You broke! Livin' in this house! Look at do silver over there. Pahaw! What yer givin' me?"

"Nothing but the truth. We are ruined. My husband's fortune is swept away, this house is mortgaged, my jewels—even my very dresses—have been sold. It is only a question of a few hours when I'll be out in the world without a penny."

"The silver on the sideboard is the only thing that is left, and it will go tomorrow. It wouldn't be here now, but for the monogram. So, you see, I know a little about trouble myself."

"Is what yer givin' me on the level, lady?" asked Jerry as she closed her eyes wearily for a moment.

"It certainly is," she replied. "Can't you see how hard it is for me? One can never judge by appearances. A rich dress does not always cover a light heart, and a smile often hides a tear. I suppose that there are many people who have envied me, never dreaming that I have been living on the brink of ruin for months."

"The end has come sooner than I expected. Tomorrow will be Easter Sunday. I have forgotten that it was so near," passing a slender hand wearily across her face.

"Well," with a bitter laugh, "my Easter gown won't create a furore tomorrow."

"Come," she said, rousing herself and turning to Jerry, "it is time you were off."

He opened his eyes in astonishment. "You don't mean to let me go?" he asked.

"Certainly," she answered with a faint smile. "I wouldn't turn a dog over to the police on Easter Eve. Come, be quick! It will soon be morning, and daylight will overtake you."

Jerry looked at her in a perplexed manner. "Say, lady," he said in a voice shaking with feeling, "I'm sure sorry yer up against it."

"Thank you for your sympathy," she said gratefully. "And now, if you will pass me that decanter and those goblets behind you on the sideboard, we will drink to your better employment and my better fortune."

"Thank you," as he filled the heavily chased cup and handed it to her. She raised it to her lips and said, "To your future health and prosperity."

"Same to you," warmly responded Jerry, snatching his lips and setting the goblet on the table. She made a quick gesture with her hand.

"Take it with you as a souvenir of our meeting," she said graciously. "Thanks, lady," said Jerry, stowing it away in his pocket.

"Since you was so white to a fellow, I'd like to give you a souvenir myself. Yer see," taking a small, carefully wrapped bundle from his pocket and opening it, "I didn't meet with no setbacks tonight. Before I struck this crib, and you can see for yourself," revealing a number of jewel rings, pins, necklaces and bracelets to her astonished vision, "so if you will kindly accept this neckpiece," holding up a beautiful string of diamonds and emeralds, "I'd be mighty proud ter give it to you."

"Why—I don't like—" she gasped. "Oh, take it, take it," urged Jerry, closing up the bundle and stuffing it back into his pocket. "Easy come, easy go, yer know."

"Well, so long, and good luck," he whispered, as he swung himself softly from the window onto the roof and disappeared.

Several minutes passed. The lady stood holding the necklace in her hand, watching the light flash and scintillate on the gleaming stones. She pursed up her lips and gave a low whistle.

"What a beauty!" she cried. "Worth five thousand dollars at least! Oh, the fool, the fool!"

Slowly she unwound the lace scarf from a sleek, black head, closely cropped, and slipped out of the enveloping folds of the pink bathrobe, standing revealed as a young man, like and slender.

"Luckily for me I came through the bathroom and heard him first," he said to himself, bringing up a dark lantern and a black mask from somewhere under the table. With one hand on the electric-button he looked cautiously about, then turned out the light, climbed softly through the window, and was gone in the night.

Better Look Outside.
If you want to make the best of your life, don't spend much time in looking within and wondering if your feelings are all right. Look outside instead, and see what you are doing for others, what you are saying about other people, how you are behaving to those around you. If you are behaving kindly and truly to your neighbor you will not go far wrong.

Hereditry.
Some very pretty things are being said, for no special reason whatever, about genealogy and hereditry. Naturally this is associated with the names and life of what is called the "nobility." Yet no commentator has quoted the couplet of Pope, which reads: "His ancient but ignoble blood has crept through scoundrels ever since the flood."

Use for German Fuel.
Fert deposits in northwest Germany are to be used as fuel for the development of electrical energy.

THE DANGER OF LA GRIPPE
Is its fatal tendency to pneumonia. To cure your la grippe coughs take Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. Dr. E. Fisher, Washington, Kas., says: "I was troubled with a severe attack of la grippe and nothing I used did me any good and I was threatened with pneumonia. A friend advised me to use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and I got some at once. I was relieved from the very first. By the time I had taken three bottles my la grippe was gone. I believe Foley's Honey and Tar Compound to be the best medicine I ever used and always keep a bottle with me." Badger Drug Co.

HEART AND HOME TALKS

How Do You Treat Your Body?

A LITTLE group of friends were dining at a fashionable restaurant. "Will you have wine?" asked one of the men. "No, I do not care for it," replied one of the girls. "Oh, do, just for once, Nan," chorused the others. But the girl was firm in her refusal. "Why?" asked the man, with an amused twinkle in his eye. "For reasons too numerous to mention, as the papers say," she laughed back.

"I would certainly like to hear them," he persisted. "It is neither the time nor the place to give them all, but one of them is, that I am rather fond of my body. It does what I want it to without complaining, and even if I ask a little more than usual of it sometimes, I brace up and put the work through. Now I do not think it is a square deal to force something on it, that is going to put it out of order. I don't go back on me, and I don't think I ought to go back on it. There is a sort of unwritten code of honor-between us."

Though she didn't know it, she was, in a way, voicing Herbert Spencer's dictum: "Few seem conscious that there is such a thing as physical morality. Men's habitual words and actions imply the idea that they are at liberty to treat their bodies as they please. Disorder entailed by disobedience to Nature's dictates, they regard simply as a grievance, not as the effects of a conduct more or less flagrant."

If more of us would look at the way we treat our bodies from this point of view, perhaps we would be healthier.

We feel aggrieved if we get sick. We are inclined to believe that something or somebody has done us a personal injury. We cherish a bitter feeling toward our stomach, or our liver, or our head, that has slipped a cog, just at the time when we most needed to be well. But we never stop to think that perhaps we have not done our part in keeping our stomach, or our liver, or our head, up to its most efficient condition.

We expect a lot of work from our body. We are often merciless to our demands upon it. And yet on the other hand, we load it down, with outcompunction, with handicaps, or things to put it out of commission. We pour into it injurious compounds in the way of food or drink, or we fail to take proper rest; and yet we seem to think that the body ought to go right on working, no matter how we treat it.

These words of Herbert Spencer are really worth pondering. If we would set up a standard of morality for the realm of the physical, as well as for the realm of the spiritual, we might find life going more pleasantly and more prosperously. It will pay to make a friend and ally of the body, and to give it a square deal, instead of knifing it in the back. We deal it poison that saps its energy, and yet expect it to go on working as efficiently as ever. Or we fail to provide it proper fuel, and yet expect it to keep steam up. We seem to have no standards of ethics in regard to our treatment of it whatever. Because we are not held responsible to human laws in regard to what we do to our own body, we act as if we had an entirely free hand in the matter. But a little honor injected into our code of treatment of the body, a little of the spirit of the square deal would bring happier results for all concerned.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

WITH every new year, the woman who had to earn all or a part of her livelihood, is finding new ways to do so and new niches to fill.

Below are some of the latest and most interesting ways to make herself useful which she has discovered. To the woman who already found her niche in some business or professional work, or in homemaking, I hope these will be interesting as showing what the other woman is doing. To the woman who is still without her niche, perhaps some word here may be directly or even indirectly suggestive. I sincerely hope so.

For if there is any person for whom I have a deep and never decreasing well of sympathy, it is the woman who has not yet found her niche in the world's work. A girl who was studying to be a teacher had to give up her course because her eyes gave out, and further study was a definite impossibility. She is now earning twice as much as most of her classmates who completed the course and became teachers. And her occupation is playmate to invalid children. Through a series of happenings she found out that she seemed to have a talent for playing with children, and especially with lame and sickly children. She was successful in getting such unfortunates to try to use their limbs when every one else failed to persuade them. Upon this talent she built up her profession. After demonstrating her ability by her success in getting one child who had been crippled by infantile paralysis to use his limbs, she was widely recommended by the boy's physician, and soon had every hour taken during six days a week as playmate to invalid children, in some cases she encouraged and helped the children in the use of their limbs, so that they were eventually cured. In others where she could not cure, she helped, and in still others simply managed to brighten an invalid's existence and teach him to be more cheerful.

The talents required for such a profession are unusual, but doubtless there are a good many women who possess them, and since the terrible scourge of infantile paralysis has come among us, there would probably be many many opportunities for such work.

Many specialists in scientific and other lines do not like to do all their reference and routine work themselves, and clever, well-educated women are constantly finding opportunities in the line of looking up references and arranging manuscripts. Somewhat similar to this is the work which a woman I know is doing in collecting family records for national and historical societies and sometimes for family use.

A letter friend sends in this description of a decidedly unusual way in which one woman earned some money:

"Mrs. B. is making a fair income by traveling in towns where summer tourists are wont to go and making it her business to find out what cottages are for rent. She then takes down a complete description of them and of their surroundings, number of rooms, size, color, etc., and notes if there are any repairs needed. She then does a real estate agent's business, but being interested in her clients and having more details at her finger tips, does the work in a much more individual and careful way than an ordinary real estate agent."

A woman, whose husband was a butcher, has conceived the idea of using the bones to make soup stock. She puts it up in neat glass jars and sells large quantities. She says that being a butcher's wife is not a necessary requirement for such work but that any woman could probably make arrangements with all the butchers in her vicinity for the use of their waste and would, undoubtedly, make good plus money this way.

Who knows but that "In-money Soup Stock" may some day be a by-word too?

UP-TO-DATE HOUSEKEEPING.

Some Common Mistakes of Woman-kind. Suggestions for Luncheon Dishes.

By Alice E. Whitaker.

A housekeeper's mistakes are not all in their cooking or in the way the laundry or sweeping is done. It is so easy, especially for the young housewife, to fall into the error of allowing the children to do all the errands until day after day goes by and the housewife is literally housebound.

It requires some exertion to get ready for a trip to market or other household errands and so gradually the going out is unwisely limited to the greater but less frequent errands. It is better to get out every day if it be to exchange the newest coin-operated with other people; things look different when you go back to the house and there is more courage to take hold of the duties.

A mistake of the class of women who yield to the fascinations of shopping is to use time that might be given to one of the organizations known as parent and teacher, home and school and mothers' circles. The time of attending to the necessary buying never need to crowd things that are for a child's welfare.

A common error of the middle aged woman is to leave the letter writing to her daughters. If she but understood that this gives up of correspondence with friends and relatives is really inviting old age. It is much better to ask the daughter to do something else and keep up the correspondence of old friends who cannot be held long by proxy letter writing.

Chicks of the right kind have saved many a middle aged or even old woman from losing her individuality and have helped preserve the family respect for her.

It is an error not to accept a husband's invitation to go out with him.

The younger wife pleads the children on a task yet undone, and with the older woman it may be the selfish love of the chimney corner that causes her to refuse.

And while considering mistakes it is well to remember that frequent habit of leaving a baby's carriage in the cold while making a neighborly call. When the child is taken from the warm room and placed in the cold carriage a chill is likely to follow. At the very least there is discomfort for the child.

Another foolish habit is to worry and fret with a small child when on a shopping trip. Play horse with him by throwing knitted reins round his shoulders and arms then there will be no danger of losing him in the aisles of the store or of his running suddenly into the street as the impulse sometimes comes upon the best of children.

Here is a tasty warm cake such as our mothers called a tea cake but we serve at luncheon. Sift four cups of pastry flour, one-half teaspoon of salt, three eighths cup of sugar, and five level teaspoons of baking powder together for three times. Beat three eggs add one cup of milk and stir in the dry ingredients with one-third cup of melted butter. Turn into a buttered shallow pan and bake about twenty five minutes. Cut in squares and serve before it is cold with butter.

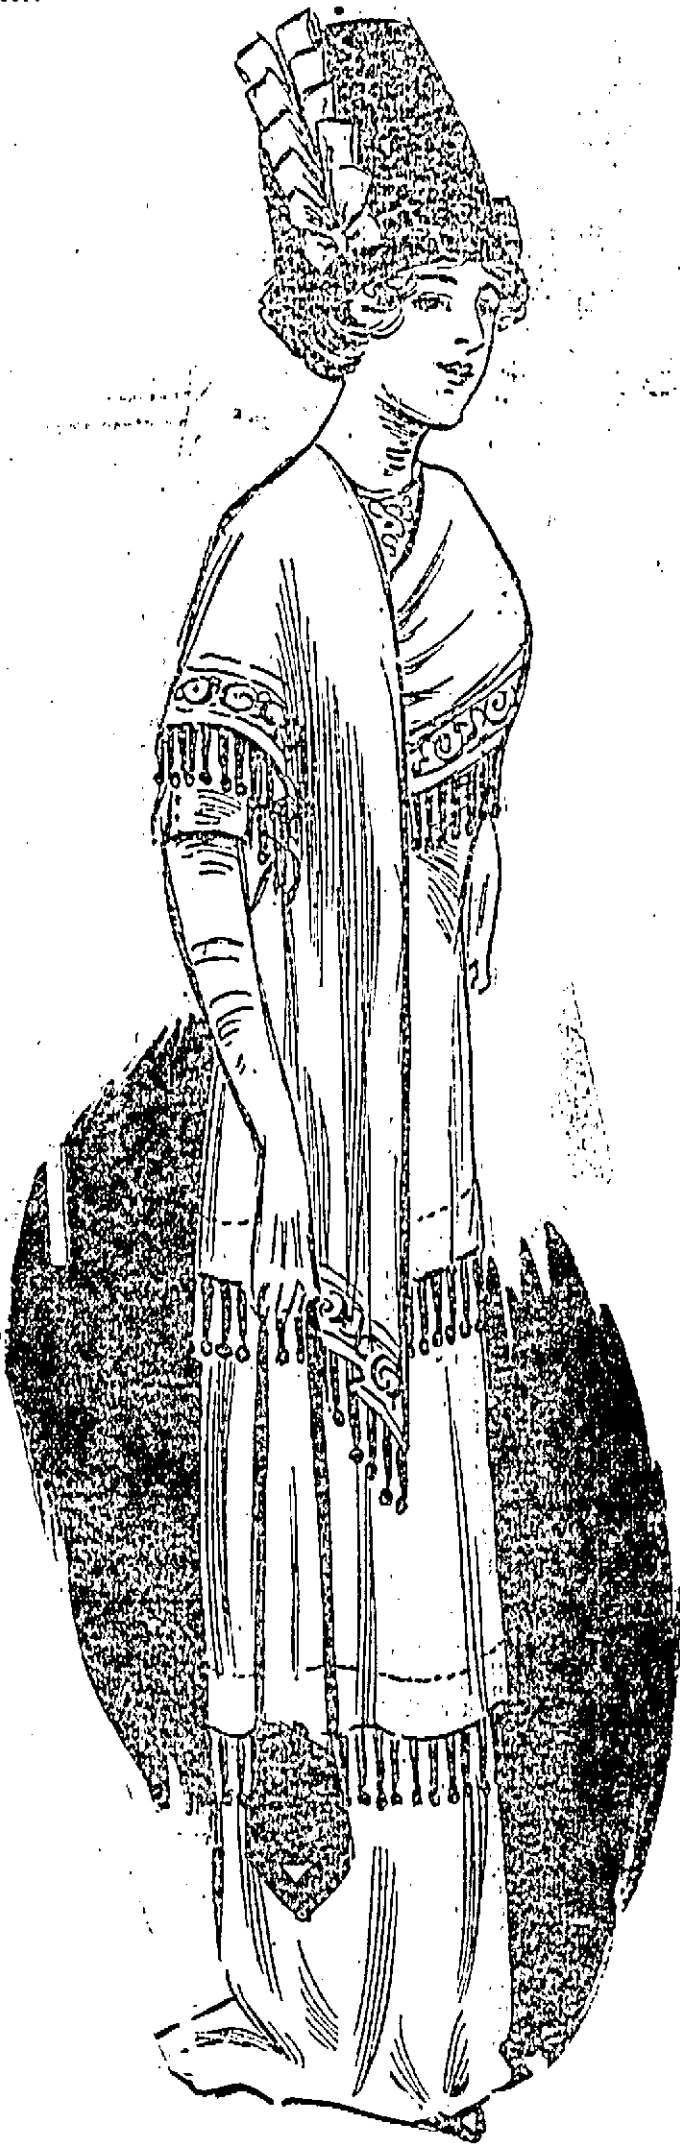

If there is some mashed potato and a bit of dry cheese in the pantry make a potato and cheese scallop. To two cups of mashed potato add one-half cup of milk and one-half teaspoon of salt. Mix in a roundish tablespoon of grated cheese and turn into a baking dish. Scatter a level tablespoon of grated cheese over the top and put dots of butter over; bake until brown. Have the cheese grated not chopped.

AN EVENING FROCK EASY TO BUILD.

If you have an old satin party dress to serve as a slip for a dinner frock like the one pictured will be very easy to contrive, and in these days of narrow skirts the least possible amount of material is required. This dinner frock is made of pale brown chiffon and allover embroidered net, and net being set into the chiffon so that the white satin underlay and not the darker chiffon shows through. The bodice is made of the net which, by the way, was dipped in weak tea to turn it a deep cream color. Narrow frills of piliase cern net at the edge of tulle, bodice and sleeve add much to the daintiness of the costume. Bodice

AN AUTUMN MODEL.

Above is pictured one of the advance gauds of fall and winter frocks, showing the artistic use of fringe combined with clever draping on a novel and pretty bodice. The material is blue silk poplin and the skirt-draped bodice is bordered with a band of Russian embroidery in red and blue. The fringe is black silk, finished on end with a tiny ball and tulle are caught up with tiny roses in a violet shade.

The KITCHEN CABINET

NE topic is preeminent for hidden to rational mortals, namely, their temperance. If you have not slept, or if you have slept, or if you have the headache, or leprosy, or thinness, I beseech you by all the angels in hold your peace, and just within the morning. Come into the sun and enjoy the day.

A NUTRITIOUS DINNER.

Turkish Soup.—Cook a fourth of a cup of rice in five cups of soup stock until soft. In one and a half cups of tomatoes cook a bay leaf, two slices of onion, one teaspoon of pepper corns, a fourth of a teaspoon of celery salt for fifteen minutes. Combine mixtures, rub through a sieve and thicken with two tablespoons of butter and a tablespoon and a half of flour.

Beef Steak Pie.—Cut remnants of cold broiled steak or roast beef in small pieces, cover with boiling water, add a half an onion and cook an hour very slowly. Remove the onion and thicken with a little flour stirred into cold water, season with salt, pepper. Add half as much potato as meat, cut in cubes and parboiled until nearly soft. Put into a buttered pudding dish and when cool cover with baking powder biscuit. Steam until the crust is cooked, then bake in the oven until brown.

Russian Salad.—Prepare each of the vegetables separately and marinate (season) with French dressing. Take one cupful each of cold cooked carrots, potatoes, peas, beans and arrange in four sections on lettuce leaves. Cover each section with mayonnaise dressing. Garnish with hard-boiled egg whites cut in rings and the yolks put through a ricer, and sprigs of parsley.

Mock Macaroon Ice Cream.—Mix together one tablespoonful of flour, a cup of sugar and one-eighth of a teaspoon of salt; add a beaten egg, then gradually two cups of scalded milk. Cook over hot water for twenty minutes, stirring constantly at first, then add a quart of cream, a tablespoonful and a half of vanilla. Cool and freeze; when half frozen add a cup of dry brown bread crumbs.

Thought for Today

THE STOUT.

A SMALL amount of daily exercise which expands the chest, stretches the waist muscles, and generally invigorates the system, will keep the normal person bodily young and free. The tendency to grow stout calls for a greater watchfulness and effort, to maintain physical proportion.

We should undertake the reduction of the weight and the prevention of normal proportion rationally. It would be very much easier if one could have a trainer, but few enjoy that luxury. When one is self-taught, one must work out an effective plan by experiment and test its success by results, and must not ask immediate results. If we are seeking permanent improvement, we should be very patient and have great faith in our good effort.

Start leisurely, while weighing night and morning systematically, and recording the weight for two or three weeks; also observe the quantity of food and drink habitually taken at meals. Note whether any more is eaten than is needed to satisfy hunger, and when there is one meal for which there is less appetite than others. That is, we should carefully observe our own habits for a while as we would observe the habits of another man for whom we were anxious to get facts upon which to base rational advice.

During this time of observation we should be taking a brisk walk every day, and doing extra deep breathing, stretching and bending; getting hardened and ready for the severer training needed to make the scales register the reward.

To reduce the weight requires a certain amount of strength and also some leisure. One should not attempt it unless well and strong, and if one is under severe strain, mental or physical, it is not wise to tax the system with a new undertaking. Vacation time is the most favorable.

BEEF EXTRACT OF LITTLE VALUE.

"What is the value of gravy?" a reader asks. Before this can be answered it will be necessary to determine what gravity is. If the chief constituent is pork fat or beef extract, there is not much to recommend it. Beef extract is no longer regarded as a good food for invalids, and its use has been generally discontinued in hospitals. The tissues of all animals contain "poisonous" waste, the waste that induces sleep. These poisons are the result of fear and worry, as much as of muscular work, and when an animal is frightened on its way to the slaughter, the extracts obtained after its death are not only of little food value, but more or less poisonous. It is well enough to please the palate, but when the appetite demands an injurious food or drink the reason should be called in to overrule it.

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY

SOME OLD-TIME FASHIONS.

By A. W. MACY.

In the fourteenth century it was the fashion to carry silver toothpicks suspended from the neck by a chain. About the end of the seventeenth century magnifying toothpicks were used, to prevent pain in the teeth, eyes and ears. In the latter part of the eighteenth century the women of England wore hoop petticoats so large that a woman wearing one occupied the space of six men. At one time the custom of dotting the face with black patches shaped like stars, stars, crosses, hearts, etc., was very prevalent in England. Some of the ladies of the court of Louis XV. wore moleskin eyebrows. At one time all English doctors were supposed to carry gold-headed canes as an emblem of authority. During the reign of William III, Anne and George I, in England, it was illegal for a tailor to make or a man to wear clothes with any other kind of buttons than brass.

The Seven Points of Beauty
How Many Have You?

The really beautiful woman must possess the following seven points of beauty:
A Good Complexion, A Perfect Figure,

A NICE HEAD OF HAIR,

Beautiful Eyes, Pretty Eyebrows,
A Well-Shaped Mouth, Good Teeth.

Very few can lay claim to all of these seven attributes of beauty. Some slip into the beauty class by possessing four or five and very many ladies succeed in being exceedingly attractive with only two or three points to their credit. The one attribute which prevents any woman from being plain may be possessed by all, and that is a nice head of hair.

Geraldine M. Forbes, writing in a recent issue of a woman's magazine and touching upon the hair in its relation to feminine good looks says: "And what a difference it makes in their appearance! One cannot look ugly if the hair grows thick and has a satin sheen. The fashion of the moment demands glossy hair and hair that lies close to the head in clinging tendrils."

TO MAKE YOUR HAIR BEAUTIFUL USE
Newbro's Herpicide

Reasonable care and effort is all that is required to "regain" almost any woman's good hair. When the hair falls out and is stringy, uneven, dry, brittle and generally unsightly, the condition is nearly always due to dandruff and the germ that causes it.

Before the hair will grow naturally and luxuriantly, the scale-like accumulation must be removed and the dandruff germ destroyed. That is what NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE does. It is an aid to nature. HERPICIDE keeps the scalp clean, adds a softness and luster to the hair which indicates health. It not only prevents the hair from falling out but causes it to become one of woman's greatest charms.

Beautiful hair and lots of it may be the reward of every woman willing to devote a little personal effort to the use of the First and Original Dandruff Germ Destroyer. Herpicide stops itching.

Applications obtained at the better Barber Shops and Hair-Dressing Parlors. Large size bottles sold and guaranteed everywhere.

The Best Shampoo Soap and Most Perfect Comb for Ladies Use
Don't use a cheap soap for shampooing. Herpicide Asseptic Tar makes a soft, creamy lather and does not harm the hair or scalp. There is nothing better. No lady can appreciate the real comfort of hair-dressing without a Herpicide Comb.

A THOROUGH TEST.

One That Will Convince the Most Cures that last are cures that count.

Donn's Kidney Pills make thorough cures.

The following case is typical. Janesville residents should be convinced.

The testimony is confirmed—the cure lasted.

Proof like this cannot be ignored.

Mrs. William Mohr, 310 N. Academy St., Janesville, Wis., says: "About two years ago I had an attack of kidney trouble and at that time I got a supply of Donn's Kidney Pills at the People's Drug Store. The use of only two boxes cured me. Other members of my family have taken Donn's Kidney Pills with satisfactory results and I therefore know this remedy to be a reliable one." (Statement given in August 1908.)

THE BENEFIT LASTED.

Mrs. Mohr when interviewed on September 23, 1910, said: "I gladly confirm my former endorsement of Donn's Kidney Pills. They permanently rid me of kidney complaint and during the past two years I have had no further need of kidney medicine." For sale by all druggists. Price 50 cents. ARGUMENTS FAVOR PROPOSED CHANGES UNDER STATE LAW

Extracts From the Text Book Published by the Madison Advertiser of the Proposed Changes.

In the following excerpts from the handbook of the Committee of One Hundred handling the Madison campaign in favor of the Commission Form of Government, the following extracts are so at the situation here, they are reprinted.

"Commission government does not increase POWER; it increases RESPONSIBILITY. It designates the individual responsibility for the exercise of the powers given. Commission government is a glass which holds the public official up to public inspection. Under the commission form of government the Council is held responsible for the city government. The entire administration is placed in the hands of this board of three members, the same as in a business corporation. This board is given power to do what ever is necessary to be done. It has the power to appoint all subordinate officers of the city, and to remove them at will whenever their services are unsatisfactory. It has the power to abolish all unnecessary and useless offices or to create any new office when required by the best interests of the city. Usually the administration of the city is divided into departments and a councilman placed in charge of each department, each councilman being held directly responsible for the management of his department. If things go wrong, he has no one to blame. He has the power to choose his assistants, and if they prove unsatisfactory he can dispense with them at once, and secure assistants that are satisfactory. If he does not do so he becomes responsible for their inefficiency, and must answer for the same to the people. He must stand upon his record, and the record of the assistants which he has chosen, for reelection. He is unhampered by any system of checks and balances, by any lack of power, or by any division of responsibility. He has no excuse for delay, or reason for shifting his burden to the shoulders of his subordinates. The system is simple, direct, efficient, businesslike. Responsibility is absolutely fixed. Some one man is responsible, and every voter knows the man.

The commission plan compels the mayor and councilmen to devote their entire time to the city's service and pays them for it—a city government at work every day in the year. The representative body of our present system meets for two or three hours once a month. Under the commission plan the city council can meet at any time. If an emergency arises the council can meet at once. If there is a complaint on the part of a citizen anywhere which requires the action of the council it can be answered and corrected at once. THE SAME DAY, without waiting two weeks for a meeting of the common council. If there is a street to repair, a sidewalk to mend, or a defective catch basin to overflow, a telephone call to the city hall is all that is needed to bring a workman AT ONCE to remedy the complaint.

Under the present system, if a citizen has a complaint he must visit the common council at night; his complaint is referred to a committee; the committee meets in another week and refers the matter to the superintendent of streets, who refers it to a foreman who takes his time to investigate the trouble and refers it back to the street superintendent; the street superintendent refers it back to the council where it goes over under the head of "Unfinished Business" for the next meeting of the common council. It is the system. The system is wrong. We have now, and always have had, good men on the common council. But what can they do? The city official is not to blame. His hands and feet are tied with red tape. A councilman cannot be efficient when he is given no opportunity to do his duty, and when he is never given the right to do things in an efficient way. Strange to say, the feature of the commission form of government which has been most frequently criticized is the very feature that has made its great success possible, namely, the concentration of power. The trouble with our city government has arisen not from what our city officials have done, but from what they have NOT done. If the fire department gets stuck on a street that has been torn up all summer, and a certain part of the city is without fire protection all the time, it is not because the street has been torn up for improvement, but because the improvement has not been made. Or, if more streets are torn up than can be improved during the year, it is not because the common council has decided to improve them, but because they have not put the proper time limit in their contracts.

The number of cases where city officials have abused the power entrusted to them are few, but the number of cases where needed public services have not been performed, or where wasteful and inefficient methods have not been abandoned because they have lacked the power to do so, are many. We have refused to give our city officials the power to do efficiently the things demanded of them; because they might abuse it. Why do we still ride on street cars when we know they might run off the track? Give your city officials the power to do the things that are necessary to be done, hold them directly and individually responsible for the exercise of it, and they will not betray the trust imposed in them. Will an honest man turn crook as soon as he is elected city commissioner? A good official will never abuse the power entrusted to him, and a bad official will not be elected by a city that wants good government. Even a bad man will not stand when he knows he is being watched.

WELL-KNOWN LAWYER CURED OF ECZEMA

By Cuticura Remedies Which He Recommends for Skin Troubles.

"While attending school at Lebanon, Ohio, in 1882, there was a small-pox scare, and we were all vaccinated. Presumably from impure virus used, I became afflicted with boils, which lasted for about two years, when the affliction assumed the form of an eczema on my face, the lower part of my face being inflamed, most of the time. There would be water-blisters on my chin, neck, and cheeks, and wherever the water would touch it would burn, and cause another one to rise. After the blisters would open, the place would scab over, and would then and then so be almost unrecognizable at times. In this way the sores would spread from one place to another, back and forth over the whole of my upper lip and chin, and at times the whole lower part of my face would be a solid sore. This condition continued for four or five years, without getting any better, and in fact got worse all the time, so much so that my wife became alarmed lest it prove fatal."

"During all this time of boils and eczema, I doctored with the best physicians of this part of the country, but to no avail. Finally I decided to try Cuticura Remedies, which I did, taking the Cuticura Sensitive, internally, applying the Cuticura Ointment to the sores, and using the Cuticura Soap for washing. In a very short time, and with great faith in them as remedies for skin diseases," (Signed) A. C. Brandon, Attorney-at-Law, Greenville, O., Jan. 17, 1911.

Sold throughout the world. Send to Potter & Co., Corp., Dept. 34, Boston, for free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

MISERY FROM INDIGESTION OR A SICK, SOUR, GASSY STOMACH

A little Diapensin makes your out-of-order stomach feel fine in five minutes.

The question as to how long you are going to continue a sufferer from indigestion, dyspepsia or out-of-order stomach is merely a matter of how soon you begin taking some Diapensin.

If your stomach is lacking in digestive power, why not help the stomach to do its work, not with drastic drugs, but a re-enforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach.

People with weak stomachs should take a little Diapensin occasionally, and there will be no more indigestion, no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, no heartburn, sour risings, Gas on stomach or belching of undigested food, Headaches, Dizziness or Sick Stomach, and, besides, what you eat will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odors. All these symptoms resulting from a sour, out-of-order stomach and dyspepsia are generally relieved in five minutes after taking a little Diapensin.

Go to your druggist and get a 50-cent case of Diapensin now, and you will always go to the table with a hearty appetite, and what you eat will taste good, because your stomach and intestines will be clean and fresh, and you will never have to go to bed with a heavy load of indigestion and make you feel like life is worth living.

WELL-KNOWN LAWYER CURED OF ECZEMA

By Cuticura Remedies Which He Recommends for Skin Troubles.

"While attending school at Lebanon, Ohio, in 1882, there was a small-pox scare, and we were all vaccinated. Presumably from impure virus used, I became afflicted with boils, which lasted for about two years, when the affliction assumed the form of an eczema on my face, the lower part of my face being inflamed, most of the time. There would be water-blisters on my chin, neck, and cheeks, and wherever the water would touch it would burn, and cause another one to rise. After the blisters would open, the place would scab over, and would then and then so be almost unrecognizable at times. In this way the sores would spread from one place to another, back and forth over the whole of my upper lip and chin, and at times the whole lower part of my face would be a solid sore. This condition continued for four or five years, without getting any better, and in fact got worse all the time, so much so that my wife became alarmed lest it prove fatal."

"During all this time of boils and eczema, I doctored with the best physicians of this part of the country, but to no avail. Finally I decided to try Cuticura Remedies, which I did, taking the Cuticura Sensitive, internally, applying the Cuticura Ointment to the sores, and using the Cuticura Soap for washing. In a very short time, and with great faith in them as remedies for skin diseases," (Signed) A. C. Brandon, Attorney-at-Law, Greenville, O., Jan. 17, 1911.

MISERY FROM INDIGESTION OR A SICK, SOUR, GASSY STOMACH

A little Diapensin makes your out-of-order stomach feel fine in five minutes.

The question as to how long you are going to continue a sufferer from indigestion, dyspepsia or out-of-order stomach is merely a matter of how soon you begin taking some Diapensin.

If your stomach is lacking in digestive power, why not help the stomach to do its work, not with drastic drugs, but a re-enforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach.

People with weak stomachs should take a little Diapensin occasionally, and there will be no more indigestion, no feeling like a lump of lead in the Ancient Needle Factory?

The discovery of a prehistoric needle factory at a prehistoric lake village near Glastonbury, England, roused much interest recently. The dwellings were placed on mounds of clay raised above the level of the water. The framework of a primitive loom was found under one mound, and the number of broken bone needles and bone splinters discovered in another mound led the explorers to think that it may have been the site of an ancient needle factory.

FRECKLES

By
Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1911, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

The angel stood glaring at him. One second Freckles lay paralyzed and dumb with astonishment. The next the Irish in his soul rose above everything. A roar of laughter burst from him. The terrified angel caught him in her arms and tried to stifle the sound. She implored and commanded. The tears rolled from Freckles' eyes and he wheezed on. When he was too worn out to utter another sound, his eyes laughed silently.

When he was quiet and rested the angel commenced talking to him softly. "Dear Freckles," she was saying, "across your knees there is the face of the mother that went into the fire for you, and I know the name—old and full of honor—to which you were born. Dear heart, which will you have first?"

"No mother!"

She lifted the lovely pictured face and set it in the nook of his arm. Freckles caught her hand and drew her down beside him, and together they gazed at the picture.

"No mother! Oh, no mother! Can you ever be forgiving me? Oh, my beautiful little mother!" he cried, Freckles over and over in exalted wonder.

"Wait!" cried the angel to the mute question she could no more answer than he could ask. "Wait, I will write it!"

She hurried to the table, caught up the nurse's pencil and on the back of

"No mother! Oh, my mother!"

a prescription tablet wrote, "Terence Maxwell O'More, Dunderry House, County Clare, Ireland."

Before she had finished came Freckles' voice, "Angel, are you hurrying?"

"Yes," said the angel, "I am. But there is a good deal of it. I have to put in your name and country, so that you will feel located."

"No house?" marveled Freckles.

"Of course," said the angel. "Your uncle says your grandmother left your father her dower house and estate, because she knew his father would cut him off. You get that, and all your share of your grandfather's property besides. It is all set out for you and waiting. Lord O'More told me so. I presume they are richer than McLean, Freckles."

She closed his fingers over the slip and straightened his hair.

"Now you are all right, dear Limberlost guard," she said. "You go to sleep and don't think of a thing but just pure joy, joy, joy! I'll keep your people until you wake up."

Freckles caught her skirt as she turned from him.

"I'll go to sleep in five minutes," he said, "If you will be doing just one thing more for me. Send for your father. Oh, angel, send for him quick!"

One instant the angel stood looking down on him. The next a crimson wave darkly stained her lovely face. Her chin began a spasmodic quivering and tears sprang into her eyes. Her hands caught at her chest as if she were stifling. Freckles' grasp on her tightened until he drew her up to him and then down beside him. He slipped his arm about her and drew her face to his pillow.

"Don't angel; for the love of mercy don't be doing that," he implored. "I can't be bearing it. Tell me. You must tell me."

The angel shook her head. "That ain't fair, angel," said Freckles. "You made me tell you when it was like tearing the heart raw from me. And you was for making everything heaven-just heaven and nothing else for me. If I'm so much more now than I was an hour ago, may-be I can be thinking of some way to fix things. You will be telling me?"

The angel's head moved in negation, she coaxed softly, moving his cheek against her hair.

The angel's head moved in negation, Freckles did a moment of intent thinking.

"Maybe I can be guessing," he whispered. "Will you be giving me three chances?"

"You didn't want me to be knowing my name," guessed Freckles.

The angel's head sprang from the pillow and her tear stained face flamed with outraged indignation.

"Why, I did, too!" she burst out angrily.

"One gone," said Freckles calmly. "You didn't want me to have relatives, a home, and money."

"I did!" screamed the angel. "Didn't I go myself, all alone, into the city, and find them when I was afraid as death?"

"Two gone," said Freckles. "You didn't want the beautiful girl in the world to be telling me!"

Down went the angel's face, and a heavy sob shook her. Freckles' clasp tightened about her shoulders, and his face, in its conflicting emotions, was a study. Despite all it meant to him to know at last his name and that he was of honorable birth—knowledge without which life was an eternal disgrace and burden—the one thing that was hammering in Freckles' heart and beating in his brain past any attempted expression was the fact that, while he might really have been nameless, the angel had told him that she loved him. He could find no word with which to begin to voice the rupture of his heart over that. But if she regretted it, if it had been a thing done out of her pity for his condition or her feeling of responsibility, if it killed him after all, there was only one thing left to do.

"Angel," whispered Freckles with his lips against her hair, "you haven't learned your history book very well, or you've forgotten."

"Forgotten what?" sobbed the angel.

"Forgotten about the real knight, ladybird," breathed Freckles softly. "Don't you know that if anything happened that made his lady worry a real knight just simply couldn't be remembering it? Angel, darling little Swamp Angel, you be listening to me. There was one night on the trail, one solemn, grand, white night that there wasn't ever any other like before or since, when the dear boss put his arm about me, and told me that he loved me, but if you care, angel, if you don't want it that way, why, I ain't remembering that anybody else ever did—not in my whole life!"

"The angel lifted her head and looked into the depths of Freckles' honest gray eyes, and they met her unwaveringly, but the pain in them was pitiful.

"Do you mean," she demanded, "that you don't remember that a broken, forward girl told you, when you hadn't asked her, that she—the angel choked on it a second, but she gave a gulp and brought it out bravely—"that she loved you?"

"No!" thundered Freckles. "Not I don't remember anything of the kind." But all the song birds of his soul burst into melody over that one little clause, "When you hadn't asked her."

"But you will," said the angel. "You may live to be an old, old man, and then you will."

"I will not!" cried Freckles. "How can you think it, angel?"

"You won't even look as if you remember!"

"I will not!" persisted Freckles. "I'd rather give it all up now and go out into sterility alone, without ever seeing a son of me same blood or me home or hearing another man call me by the name I was born to than to remember anything that would be hurting you, angel."

CHAPTER XXIV.
RINGS AND A FEATHER.

THE angel's tear stained face flashed into dazzling beauty.

"Oh, Freckles, forgive me!" she cried. "I've been through so much that I'm scarcely myself or I wouldn't be here bothering you when you should be sleeping. Of course you couldn't. You're too good a knight to remember a thing like that. Of course you are! And when you don't remember, why, then it's the same as if it never happened. Oh, Freckles, I'm so glad! I'm so happy! It's dear of you to not remember, Freckles; perfectly dear! It's no wonder I love you so. The wonder would be if I did not. I should like to know how I'm ever going to make you understand how much I love you!"

Pillow and all, she caught him to her breast, and then she was gone.

Freckles lay dazed with astonishment. At last his battling eyes rolled about the room, searching for something approaching the human to which he could appeal, and, failing on his mother's portrait, he set it up before him.

"For the love of life! No little mother," he panted, "did you hear that? Did you hear it? Tell me, am I living or am I dead and all heaven come true this minute? Did you hear it? You are only a pictured face, and of course you can't talk, but the soul of you must be somewhere, and surely in this hour you are near enough to be hearing." Tell me, did you hear that? I can't ever be telling a living soul; but, darling little mother, that gave your life for mine, I can always be talking of it to you! Every day we'll talk it over and try to understand the miracle of it. Tell me, are all women like that? Were you like my Swamp Angel? If you were then I'm understanding why my father followed across the ocean and went into the fire after you."

Freckles' voice trailed off, his eyes dropped shut, and his head rolled back from sheer exhaustion. Later in the day he lay on seeing Lord and Lady O'More, but he faintly before the look of his own face on that of another man.

The next morning the man of affairs, with a heart filled with misgivings, undertook the interview on which Freckles insisted. His fears were without cause. Freckles was the soul of honor and simplicity.

"Have they been telling you what's come to me?" he asked without even waiting for a greeting.

"Yes," said the angel's father.

"Do you think you have the very worst of it clear to your understanding?"

Under Freckles' earnest eyes the man of affairs answered soberly, "I think I have, Mr. O'More."

That was the first time Freckles heard his name from the lips of another man. One second he lay over-como, the next great tears filled his eyes, and he reached out his hand.

Then the angel's father understood, and he clasped that hand and held it in a strong, firm grasp.

"Terence, my boy," he said, "let me do the talking. I came in here with the understanding that you wanted to ask me for my only child. I should like, at the proper time, to regard her marriage, if she has found the man she desired to marry, not as losing all I have, but as gaining a man I can depend on to love as a son and to take charge of my affairs for her when I retire from business. Bend all of your energies toward rapid recovery, and from this hour understand that my daughter and my home are yours."

"You're not forgetting this?" Freckles lifted his right arm.

"Terence, I'm sorer than I have words to express about that," said the man of affairs. "But if it's up to me to choose whether I give all I have left in this world to a man with a hand on his body or to one of those gambling, tippling, immoral spend-thrifts of today, with both hands and feet of their souls and a rotten spot in the core, I choose you, and it seems that my daughter does the same. Put what is left of that right arm to the best uses you can in this world, and never again shudder or feel that it is defective as long as you live. Good day, sir!"

"One minute more," said Freckles. "Yesterday the angel was telling me that there was money coming to me from two sources. She said that my grandmother had left me father all of her fortune and her house because she knew that his father would be cutting him off, and that my uncle had also set aside for me what would be my father's interest in his father's estate."

"Whatever the sum is that my grandmother left me father, because she loved him and wanted him to be having it, that I'll be taking. 'Twas hers from her father, and she had the right to be giving it as she chose. Anything from the man that knowingly left me father and me mother to go cold and hungry and into the fire in misery when just a little would have made life so beautiful to them and saved me this crippled body—money that he willed from me when he knew I was living, of his blood and on charity among strangers, I don't touch, and if I freeze, starve and burn too! If there ain't enough besides that and I can't be earning enough to fix things for the angel!"

"We are not discussing money!" burst in the man of affairs. "We don't want any blood money! We have all we need without it. If you don't feel right and easy over it, don't you touch a cent of any of it."

"It's right I should have what my grandmother intended for me father, and I want it," said Freckles, "but I'd like before I'd touch a cent of my grandmother's money."

"Now," said the angel, "we are all going home. We have done all we can for Freckles. His people are here. He needs to know them. They are very anxious to get acquainted with him. We'll turn him over to them and go home. When he is well, why, then he will be perfectly free to go to Ireland or come to the Limberlost, just as he chooses. We will go right away."

McLean bore it for a week, and then he could stand it no longer. Communing with himself in the long, soundless nights of the swamp, he had learned to his astonishment that for the last year his heart had been circling the Limberlost with Freckles.

He started for Chicago, loaded with a big box of gold-rod, waters, fringed gentians and crimson leaves that the angel had carefully gathered for Freckles' room, and a little, long slender package. He would not admit it even to himself, but he was unable to remain longer away from Freckles and leave him to the care of Lord O'More.

Did't Blame Him.
Pete Dalley one time was playing in Chicago at the head of his own company. At another theater there was a German comedian being starred in a musical comedy. One afternoon Dalley and the German comedian were walking along State street when the former spoke to a man who passed. "Who was that?" asked the German comedian. "He's in my support," replied Dalley. "What?" said the German comedian, showing surprise. "Do you speak to the members of your company on the street?" "To be sure," replied Dalley. "I don't speak to the members of mine." "Well," said Pete, "I wouldn't either if I had your company."

Work and Prayer.
Work with all your might; but trust not in the least in your work. Pray with all your might for the blessing of God; but work, at the same time, with all diligence, with all patience, with all perseverance. Pray, then, and work. Work and pray. And still again pray and work, and this all the days of your life.—George Muller.

Courage and Duty.
To be strong in duty and dreary duty is almost the hardest task a man can face. It is a noble thing to be brave in tragic moments, but perhaps there is something even nobler than that. It is to be brave and glad, and strong, and tender when the sky is gray and when the road is dreary.—George H. Morison.

How Musicians Profit.
If Caruso, the great tenor, happens to lose his voice or become incapacitated because of such illness as has kept him off the operatic stage, the last half of two seasons, he will feel consoled by the knowledge that his royalties from a phonograph company will exceed $100,000 a year for many years to come; while Mme. Tetrazzini, is grateful that the same company refunded her $1,000 five years ago, for the same effort that they are now paying her $25,000 a year for. Then the diva was willing to take the lower figure outright for her cords, but a year ago she demanded a bonus of $25,000 besides the royalties, and she got it.—Popular Mechanics.
